Americans for Peace Now

Settlements are just one area of our expertise:

APN echoes your pro-Israel, pro-peace voice in Washington among elected officials. APN's Government Relations program was rated "second to none" in Capitol Hill's prestigious Roll Call newspaper.

Peace Now is the largest grassroots movement in Israel. No other group has ever mobilized as many Israeli citizens to demonstrate in support of peace.

APN drives key information on the path to peace to reporters, diplomats, and elected officials.

Peace Now's legal advocacy has stopped settlement construction. When settlers build in violation of Israeli law, Peace Now appeals to the Israeli courts to stop illegal construction.

APN raises funds to support the programs of the Israeli Peace Now movement.

Peace Now hosts educational seminars across Israel and brings together young Israeli and Palestinian opinion leaders to talk and to plan joint political action.

APN dispatches speakers to campuses and congregations around the country.

About this map:

This map of West Bank settlements is produced by Peace Now staff and volunteers based on their ongoing monitoring of settlement activity. Peace Now documents the expropriation of land, the establishment of new settlements, and the expansion of existing settlements. Peace Now analyzes the demographic, economic, and security ramifications of settlement activity in the West Bank.

Settlements undermine Israel's security and hurt the prospects for peace, but they are also backed by a powerful lobby in Israel which tries to hide settlement growth from the public eye. That is why Peace Now's role as the preeminent source of timely, reliable, and comprehensive information about settlements is so important.

The data we collect is the chief source of information on settlements for journalists, diplomats and even U.S. and Israeli government officials. The New York Times, Newsweek, the Washington Post and many others recently credited Peace Now or APN as a resource for their reporting on settlements.

This map demonstrates the manner in which existing settlements, lying cheek-to-jowl with Palestinian cities and towns, complicate the push for a two-state solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

"Peace Now has a record of careful and accurate reporting on settlement growth."
- The New York Times

"Had Peace Now not published reports... it is doubtful that anyone would have been aware of the continuing constructions in settlements..."
- Haaretz

Believe in Israel. Believe in Peace.
